Black Mountain poets

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

The Black Mountain poets, sometimes called projectivist poets, were a group of mid 20th century American avant-garde or postmodern poets centered on Black Mountain College in North Carolina.

Principal figures

In addition to Olson, the poets most closely associated with Black Mountain include Larry Eigner, Robert Duncan, Ed Dorn, Paul Blackburn, Hilda Morley, John Wieners, Joel Oppenheimer, Denise Levertov, Jonathan Williams and Robert Creeley. Creeley worked as a teacher and editor of the Black Mountain Review for two years, moving to San Francisco in 1957. There, he acted as a link between the Black Mountain poets and the Beats, many of whom he had published in the review. Also, the appearance in 1960 of Donald Allen's anthology The New American Poetry 1945-1960 (which divides the poets included in its pages into various schools) was crucial: it established a legacy and promoted the influence of the Black Mountain poets worldwide.

Background

Its art teachers included Anni and Josef Albers, Eric Bentley, Ilya Bolotowsky, Willem and Elaine de Kooning, Buckminster Fuller, Lyonel Feininger, Franz Kline, Walter Gropius and Robert Motherwell. Among their students were John Chamberlain, Kenneth Noland, Robert Rauschenberg, Dorothea Rockburne, James Bishop, Ruth Asawa, Stan Vanderbeek, Kenneth

Subject: APHA Fellowship Program

Dear Bob and Charles,

I received notification of the American Print History Association's recent announcement of a grant, up to $2,000 for researchers working on the history of print. The specifications for the projects are quite general, as are the qualifications for entry. I would like to enter a one-page description of my project (academic affiliation is o.k., but not required) with two letters of recommendation.

These materials are due on the first of December. If you are willing, and have time before said date, I would very much appreciate your assistance. Of course, I could provide any information that would aid in your composition of a letter in support of the project. The application, and details are all available on line at the link below.

Best Wishes,

Kyle
