

Summary

The group agreed that this paper, a literature summary, was a good “jumping-off” point into exploring more about literature mining. The authors covered a number of different facets and techniques relating to literature mining and presented significant research studies pertaining to each technique. The group would have liked to see a more thorough explanation of how natural language processing techniques work; therefore, much of the discussion was based on this explanation. As part of the presentation, the group explored and discussed a web-based literature mining tool, iHOP.